The national bicycle safety program will be sponsored here by members of the Optimists Club. The program is scheduled for April.

The sports club volunteers, working under the direction of Frank J. LesTina, 732 Albion St., chairman of volunteer workers at the Indoor Sports Club, expect to complete the immediate job at 4:30 p. m. Friday. Contents of the envelopes, which already had been hand-addressed by volunteers, contain an educational folder, a return envelope and a general letter outlining the aims of this year's Crusade.

Exhibit On Display At Hi-Schools

During the six-week period ending April 17, the exhibit, sponsored and prepared by the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge, Pa., will be seen in 10 city secondary grade schools. Each school will display the exhibit for two and a half days.

The "Valley Forge Panorama" consists of 50 display panels, each measuring 4x5 feet. Arranged in easy-to-follow sequence, they include:

The story of Valley Forge; the Credo of the American Way of Life; a special message to students from J. Edgar Hoover; the growth of communism throughout the world; how students, teachers and schools can qualify for Freedoms Foundation awards.

In addition, each exhibit includes a colorful set of 48 state flags and a historic group of early American flags.

Nature Talks

Along the streams of Northern California and Oregon there lives a peculiar little animal known as the Sewellel, Showt'l, or as the Indians called it, the Mountain Beaver.

Found only along streams and feeding strictly on water plants and ferns, they are quite common but seldom seen, as they are very shy and do most of their foraging at night, although on few occasions I have had the pleasure of observing them in the day time.

About the size of a Musk-Rat, but practically tailless, with rich chestnut colored fur and long bristly whiskers. Their burrows are very common along the banks of mountain streams and are sometimes used by other animals.

One may often see a large pile of leaves, ferns or other vegetation spread in front of the burrows to cure in the sun. When thoroughly dried it is packed into the burrow and stored like hay for future use.

'Boom' Delay In Official Co. Report

Considerable disappointment is being expressed by residents and business people after hearing the latest sanitation reports from County Public Works officials at the Chamber meeting last Wednesday.

The more than 100 persons attending the meeting realize now that the installation of sewer facilities is a year further away than had previously been expected, if the bond issue is successful at the polls next February.

Many proposed business expansions and residential projects will be delayed a year longer. Petitions for more signatures to enlarge the sanitation district are expected to be circulated soon. New street lighting will also be delayed.

Tapioca Molds Are Pretty Desserts

Every homemaker knows the value of a dish which is made in advance and keeps in the refrigerator until serving time.

These individual molds of Creamy Tapioca Pudding are an example of good planning for dessert time. When ready to serve, just unmold on pretty plates or nappies, and spoon fresh sweetened strawberries over them. A garnish of whipped cream may be added.

Strawberry Tapioca Molds

- | | |
|---------------------|-------------------------------------|
| 1 egg white | 3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca |
| 2 tablespoons sugar | 1/4 teaspoon salt |
| 1 egg yolk | 2 or 3 tablespoons sugar |
| 2 cups milk | 1/2 teaspoon vanilla |

Beat egg white until foamy throughout; add 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, and continue beating with rotary egg beater until mixture will stand in soft peaks. Set aside.

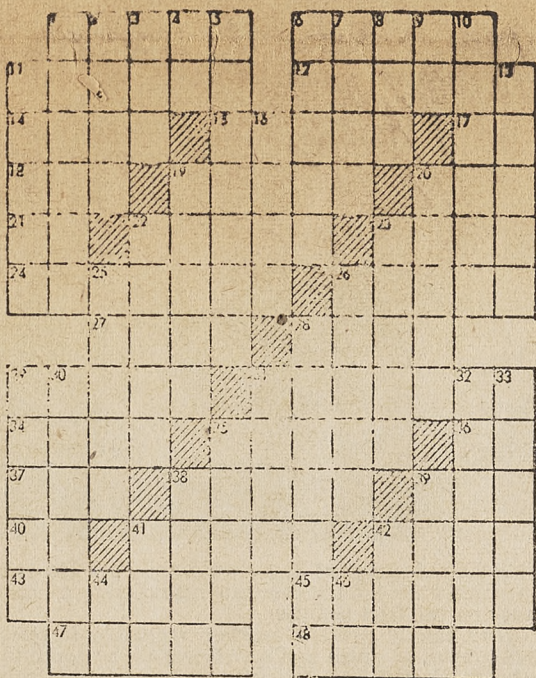

Mix egg yolk with about 1/4 cup of the milk in saucepan. Add tapioca, salt, 2 or 3 tablespoons sugar, and remaining milk. Place over medium heat. Cook until mixture comes to a boil, stirring constantly—this takes 5 to 8 minutes.

Pour small amount of hot tapioca mixture gradually on beaten egg white, blending well. Then quickly add the remaining mixture, stirring constantly. (The hotter the tapioca and the faster it is blended in, the thicker and fluffier the pudding will be.) Add vanilla. Turn at once into individual molds. Let stand 20 minutes at room temperature. Then chill until firm. Unmold and serve with sweetened sliced strawberries. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Carport with Woven Fence

A CARPORT with a woven wall makes a low-cost, interesting and mighty useful addition to any house. This is especially true if the carport has a storage area for garden tools.

Such a carport is shown in the illustration. A free plan for its construction is available.

The handsome woven wall is made by weaving strips of Masonite 1/4" siding, one foot wide and eight feet long, between 4 by 4-inch posts set into the concrete driveway. Readily pliable for this weaving process, the Masonite siding is easy to work with, as it is splinter-free and free of defects. It takes a beautiful paint finish and will last for years.

An important feature of the garden tool storage room is the "Peg-Board" paneling on which may be suspended the various tools by means of interchangeable metal fixtures. These perforated panels, the lumber and other materials needed for this project may be obtained at lumber yards. Furniture Fashions

Luxuriously comfortable and easy to move as well as easy to clean, this smartly tailored upholstered chair is a housewife's dream.

The 100 per cent figured nylon frieze fabric may be kept showroom-fresh by sponging gently with a damp cloth. Nylon upholstery wears well, is fade resistant, moth proof and comes in a wide range of colors. Mounted on scarcely discernible casters, this chair may be moved anywhere in the room with a minimum of effort—a great advantage in this television age.

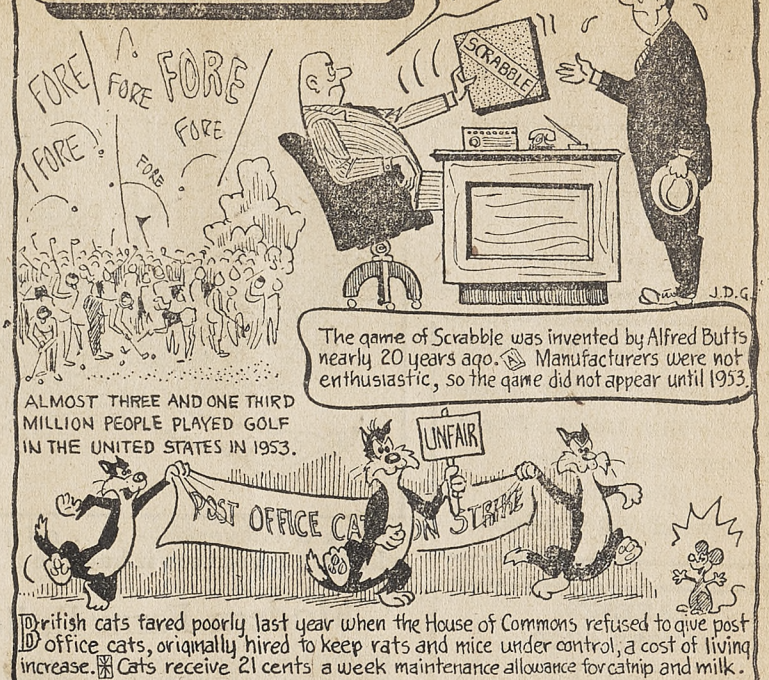

Foam rubber cushion, back and arms, a hardwood frame and coil spring construction insure years of satisfaction.

American women, the researchers say, are showing a marked preference for furniture that is comfortable, informal and easy to clean, and here is an attractive, inexpensive chair that more than meets all of these 1953 requirements.

Make the Most of Situations

HARRY K. GARD, Galesburg, Illinois, a year ago came perilously near to losing his local automobile agency and, as he says, all because he was stupidly allowing worry and fear to poison his mind. He had just purchased the agency when the factory went into a prolonged strike; his bank account was at a very low figure; Uncle Sam was breathing down his neck for a large sum of money on delinquent income tax and his only source of revenue was the service department which was doing practically no business whatsoever. He went to his office every day for a week with a case of mental he-beebies.

Finally, he went to one of the local banks to establish a line of credit. His sales talk to the bank president was probably the world's poorest. for his turn down was a verbal kick in the pants. In other words, the banker's refusal told him that he didn't think he had the ability to succeed in Galesburg.

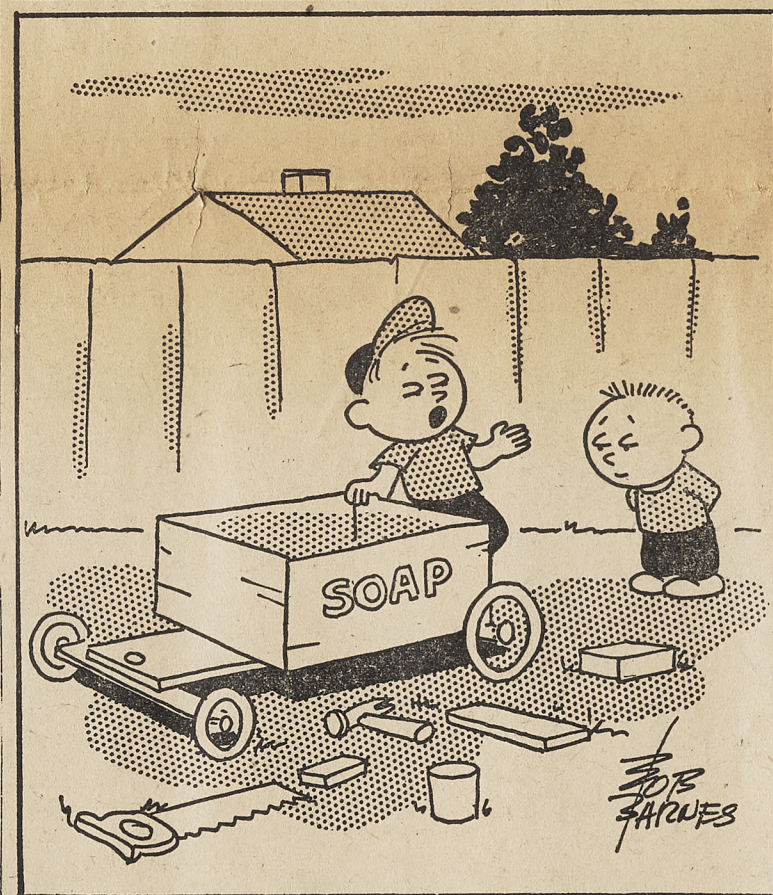

He went back to his office fighting mad. Calling all his employees together he told them the situation and asked for their cooperation without too much financial consideration. He was very fortunate! He says, "You should have seen those fellows work. We purchased two barrels of paint and remodeled our whole place. Everyone, including myself, arrived early and worked late—and the agency took a new lease on life. The enthusiasm was contagious. All the old customers started rolling in and new ones came from curiosity."

As a result, they lost a little, but only a small amount of money during the strike; Uncle Sam wasn't the vicious money monger he had thought, and it wasn't too long before a big money lending firm called him and asked if he needed some money (which he didn't). Everything has been just Jim Dandy because he didn't take time to worry and fret, but got to work and made the most of the situation at hand.

LAFF OF THE WEEK

It's a convertible . . . all ya gotta do is knock off the wheels an' convert it back to a soap box.

Modern Farm Building Fails Flames

A means by which the farmer can protect his crops and machinery from the major hazard of fire is illustrated by this graphic photo. Snapped at the height of flames which razed the adjoining structure, the picture shows a Quonset building near Wells, Minn., undergoing a seige of sparks and heat from which it emerged unscathed. More than 140,000 bushels of soybeans stored in the building by Ed Frank and his sons were unharmed.

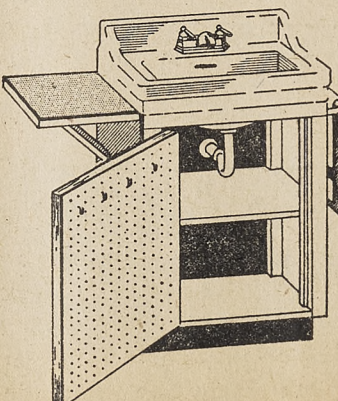

The need for using such non-combustible buildings as all-steel Quonsets for crop and machinery storage is emphasized by a National Board of Fire Underwriters' report that flames take an estimated toll of $100,000,000 worth of property every year. A large percentage of farm fires results in total or nearly total losses because the ordinary farm structure neither contains nor resists flames, water supplies are insufficient and good fire fighting equipment is not at hand.

Lavatory Enclosure

AN ENCLOSURE for a lavatory not only will enhance the appearance of the bathroom but will provide additional storage space.

In the plan illustrated, the inside of the door is faced with a Masonite "Peg-Board" panel.

Various items can be stored on it by means of metal hooks and fixtures which fit into the various holes. Both the perforated panel and fixtures are available at lumber yards.

The "Peg-Board" panel serves also to keep the enclosure ventilated.

Sides and bottom of the cabinet are Masonite Tempered Presswood, a material which withstands wear and the high humidities of bathrooms.

"I REMEMBER" BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Newt Hatter, Pinecastle, Wis.: My mother about September would get ready to weave cloth. First she would card and spin the yarn on a big spinning wheel, then gather walnut hulls and sage grass, etc., to dye the yarn. Then she would weave out a hundred yards of linsey cloth from which she made blankets. Then she would put in another warp of a hundred yards for jeans.

From Mrs. David McMullen, Bordentown, N.J.: I used to watch the farmer make sorghum molasses. A man would feed the cane into three round cylinders, turned by a long pole, propelled by a mule, and the juice would come out of a spout into a bucket. The juice was put in a long vat to cook. It cooked a long time, and sometimes I'd go down to the vat after some molasses for taffy.

From George H. Briggs, Los Angeles: As a small boy I hung around the harness shop of an uncle much admired. Each autumn he would bring in great rolls of buffalo hides. The farm people would buy these for use in the winter as robes, rugs or material for coats.

From Clarence Coleman, Louisville, Ky.: Well do I remember back in the Gay Nineties when as a young sprout of from 12 to 15 years, I made my big money selling May apple root, for which I usually received in the neighborhood of a penny a pound.

From the Old Cuss, Chicago: I remember when the nickelodeon was a national institution and a singer known as the Flatbush Brunehilde, "the gal with the torso and the tassel," who made popular the song, "The Pitcher of Beer." If you remember these, my hearties, you are no younger than I.

An All-Time favorite

A big dish of succulent Sauerkraut and Pork Hocks is a sure-hit with the men in the family. Both the sauerkraut and pork hocks (or knuckles), are easy on the food pennies.

If your family prefers another vegetable instead of sauerkraut, canned greens, or green and wax beans are seasoned to perfection with pork hocks. Cook the meat slowly and add the vegetables a few minutes before serving. Where time is an element, cook the hocks the night before or in the morning and store in the refrigerator. Serve fluffy mashed potatoes, canned spiced peaches or apricots, and a crisp salad to round out the main course. It's an easy meal to get when you use canned foods. The cleaning and pre-work has been done in the canners' kitchens.

Sauerkraut and Pork Hocks

2 cups water 1½ teaspoons salt
3 lbs. pork hocks 1 No. 2½ can sauerkraut
(4 to 6 hocks)

Bring water to boiling; add pork hocks and salt. Cover and simmer very gently until tender (about 2 hours). Add sauerkraut and continue to simmer for another 10 minutes. Four to six generous servings.

TRY THESE CANNED VEGETABLE AND PORK HOCK COMBINATIONS:

SUNDOWN ON THE PACIFIC SHORE

A novel about the Great West

BY RENAN PREVOST

PREFACE

All thru the West there are Ghost Towns. Mostly in the region of the gold mines, of the wild, reckless days of 1849 and after. There are ruins of buildings and etc., which have a story, of the days, of glory and easy wealth for some men; and disappointment and tragic passing for other men.

About every city there are happenings of the past which are not always recorded; some men leave great names for their accomplishments, and land marks are named after them such as Parks, Streets and Schools. Also there are men, the workers who have "done the work" who are usually forgotten, with their passing on from this world. This story is about these men of great courage, supreme courage. Many of them arrived here without funds, and so gainful employment was necessary and that was work—hard work. Work not in line with their skill in a trade or profession.

Ghost towns have their story. So stories exist about buildings, water works, factories, railroads and other endeavors concerned with the earning of a livelihood. These stories become interesting, because they portray a life during the days of the past, almost forgotten. Great buildings or public utilities are usually known by the name of the man or corporation which caused the construction. Very seldom is any credit given to an architect, or the men who actually did the work. These were the men—the "brains" who were responsible for the erection of the structure or etc. And so this novel is about those "brains" and how they came West and what their life was like.

There are certain things effecting the economic welfare of men, which cause them to migrate. Generally it is promise of better living conditions or opportunities of easy attainment of wealth, thru land booms, new agricultural crops such as rare fruits, a better livable climate, as an aid to regain health; or as in the case of the colonization of this great country— an escape from persecution or oppression.

Men have been traveling to the West for generations, so we travel West with our characters, starting in 1880.

PART ONE

PART TWO

Next day the high wheel gas-buggy was delivered to Tom.

It came down the street being pulled by two large horses. One man hollered out, "Are the horses standard equipment with that contraption?"

However, Negroes are generally a jolly lot, so the answer was polite.

"Sure am, boss. Dis here am a gas burner and a hay eater combination. It can go forwards and backwards, anytime any place."

"Where are you going with that 'gallant headache'?" inquired another.

"Am taking it to Charlie's boy, Tom. He am going to make it run. You see, he am a smart boy."

"Grandpa, there is going to be an automobile fair in Chicago—gee, wish I could go there and see it. Does it cost much to go and see a fair?" asked Tom.

"Sure, maybe a hundred dollars."

"A hundred dollars? Guess I won't see the fair. It is going to be way back East. Called the Chicago Automobile Show, a show of horseless carriages. Will there ever be an automobile show in New Town?"

"Well, I don't think so. New Town is a small place."

"Gee, I would like to go see the automobiles at that show," pleaded Tom.

So finally the gas-buggy arrived. Tom was waiting. It was put out back. What a yard! Manure piles, broken wagons, buggies, and an assortment of livery stable junk.

Tom was happy now. A real gas-buggy to make run. He worked on it, cleaned it all over, inspected all the "works" as he called the different parts. One week passed, still it would not run. He turned the starting crank countless numbers of times. Madam Fournier's Negro came down to inquire if any parts were needed. No, there were no broken parts. The motor only was a rats' nest and a real cleaning it got. Tom was paid ten dollars for the cleaning job. Days passed, yet he could not start the motor. He turned that crank so much, so much. What persistence that boy had. It was hurting his pride, not being able to start the motor.

"Well, son," remarked his father, Charlie, "maybe it just won't run."

"Dad, I think it will run, and here is my idea. Suppose you have the Negro haul it up the Sixth Street hill, then I will coast down hill with it in gear, that will turn the motor over fast, and if it is going to run, that should do it."

"Well, that sounds reasonable; but you know that is a high class residential neighborhood. Maybe some of people there won't like it."

"Why not? These are public streets. Those people don't own the streets."

"Well, all right. Tomorrow morning we will try it."

That night Tom did not sleep much, just thinking and planning how he would handle the gas buggy.

Morning, and up Sixth Street hill went the gas-buggy.

Soon a crowd gathered. Many remarks were made such as:

"Hey, where do you carry the hay and oats?"

"That thing won't run by itself, better be careful. The damn thing might blow up."

Four blocks to the top of Sixth Street hill, a steep hill. The team slowed when nearing the top. Finally it was turned around and Tom, in the driver's seat, the tiller firmly in his hand, he released the brake. Slowly at first, it started to coast. Then Tom let in the clutch. The gas-buggy almost stopped. A roar of laughter was heard. Then the gas-buggy started down again. "Chug, chug." The motor was running, "chug, chug," smoke came heavy from the exhaust. Then the vehicle came along under its own power, and running nicely at the bottom of the hill. Then on to H Street.

Tom turned up the main street of the town, H Street. He was a slow, careful driver. The old rubber bulb horn was used plenty. Tom was a proud boy. He made it run. After passing up H Street he then turned around for a return trip to the stable.

"Soon Madam Fournier heard about the display. Charlie and Tom, fearing failure to make the car run, did not inform the Madam about the hill experiment.

Tom had many good wishes from the men at the stable. Charlie was a proud father. His boy a mechanic, now he would have a decent place to work, not out back in the junk heap.

"Well, son," Madam Fournier said, promptly upon her arrival at the stable, "So you made it run."

"Yes, mam."

"That is fine. How much is your bill?" she asked.

"I worked on it two weeks, mam," Tom answered.

"What was the matter with it?" she inquired.

"Oh, not much, except it was a rats' nest that needed cleaning."

"Here is twenty dollars. I think you have earned it. Now take me for a ride. Maybe I can learn to run it."

Looking at the boy's father, she said, "Come along, Charlie, we may need your help," extended Madam Fournier.

She got in the rear seat. Charlie sat in front. Tom turned the crank and "chug, chug" and the motor soon was purring like a lively kitten. Tom at the tiller and off they went, a merry ride up the main street. Greetings were extended by the people on the route of travel, and acknowledgements were prompt by the Madam. Then back to the stable.

"That is very fine. Tomorrow you can teach me how to run this 'gallant vehicle,'" suggested the Madam.

The name which Stayson called it, which always stuck, much to his disgust. When it had passed by the loan office four times in one afternoon that was too much for him. The 'gallant headache' had returned. Tom whistled Yankee Doodle when passing.

The Madam soon learned to run the machine, which she now kept at her home stable. She always had a Negro ride in the rear. He was the official motor starter, and handy man, package carrier and general guardian for "gallant vehicle."

PART THREE

There was a slaughter house near the lower end of the bay. Cattle were obtained twice yearly, from the farmers in the mountain areas. The slaughter house was operated by a man who had a general store. Farmers obtained semi-annual credit for supplies necessary for the home and farm. This was a liberal and unusual credit arrangement.

A buggy and horse, with the driver a bill collector with authority to bid in cattle in payment of the account, and also to hire cowboys to herd the cattle to the slaughter pen, and once a year Twitcher was the honored guest to go along to see the country. The trips took two weeks or longer. The cattle were herded to the central corrals, from the scattered farms. Then when one district was completely canvassed, the cattle, most not very tame, were herded to the city for slaughtering.

Soon Twitcher knew the country, and from all appearances he expected to make it profitable some day.

He had a small place at the Lake. He called it his camp. Twitcher's camp at the Lake. The big trees, pines, oaks and cedars, reminded him of his boyhood home in New England. But how different from the Maple trees, whose leaves turned to red, golden yellow and bronze in the Fall, just before shedding and falling to the ground.

Sometimes he became lonesome for that country of trees and green hills, with many lakes, and the pride of boyhood days of nut gathering, for winter use.

He was a lover of the great outdoors, the open country, the trees, the very quietness was so restful and refreshing. Well he remembered the school boy days when a party would camp in the woods over Sunday. Tap a few Maple trees for syrup, make bonfires to boil the first syrup, to make it thick and finally sugar.

Then how scary some of the novice boys would be at night time when hoot owls would come a visiting. So generally an old shoe was carried along and when the new initiated to the hoot owl, then the shoe was thrown on the fire. Such an order. The owls soon made haste for other places unknown.

A thought had been in Twitcher's mind for a long time. A summer camp at the Lake for the underprivileged children of the City. But that would have to wait until transportation was faster to the lake region. Somehow, some day that camp would be established, and Twitcher hoped it would be in the not too far distant future.

One afternoon when business was quiet at the James Twitcher real estate office, the usual month-end quietness, one visitor was a man named Colyer, a real estate salesman.

Introducing himself, he said, "My name is Daniel Colyer. I hope you have heard of me."

"Yes, I have, and I am proud to know you," replied Twitcher.

"Business being quiet, I have come to talk to you about joining the Chamber of Commerce. We need some new blood, so to speak, and you are aggressive and so I will extend you the invitation to come to the meeting tonight," so said Daniel Colyer.

"Yes, I will be happy to go."

"Oh, yes, I must inform you that a speech will be expected of you. Can you prepare one on such short notice?"

"Yes, it is all prepared."

"I don't understand. All prepared. Don't you have to write it down on paper, then read it tonight at the meeting?" asked Daniel.

"No, that will not be necessary. I like to talk about things which are appropriate at the time. Don't worry, I can meet the situation," replied Twitcher.

"Good. Then I will meet you there, and introduce you."

With that one, Daniel Colyer promptly departed.

It being late in the afternoon, Twitcher closed up the office and went home. At last the opportunity he had been waiting for. They, the town pillars of banking and merchandizing would listen to a New England Yankee. Not a "Bumkin," as they might expect.

"Why, you are home early tonight, exclaimed Martha, Twitcher's loving wife. A loving wife in all that the term implies.

"Yes, Martha, I have been invited to attend the Chamber of Commerce meeting tonight, so thought I would come home and prepare for the ordeal."

"Ordeal? I don't understand."

"No, not exactly an ordeal. That is too harsh. Maybe I should say, well, just a sedate gentlemen's meeting, and I am expected to make a speech," said James.

"Can you make a speech, James, on so short a notice?" asked Martha.

Yes, I am prepared. Maybe we can read the speech in this week's paper. Anyhow, I hope the local newspaperman is there and can write it down as I say it."

"Well, here's hoping for the best. Thereupon Martha put her arms around James' neck and kissed him, genuinely as a true wife, accompanied by a body to body hug.

AT THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

"Gentlemen, I will now call the meeting to order.

"Gentlemen, please be quiet. You'll have plenty of time for conversation after the meeting." So said the official in charge, one Mr. Sam Stayson, who then continued, "We of this fair city come to meeting here once a month to exchange ideas for the betterment of our city. I propose the meeting come to order, transact the business at hand, and then we promptly return to our respective homes or places of abode."

"Mr. Chairman," spoke one individual, "I propose that we pass a resolution that the County pay some money to the Chamber for advertising this place. We need to let the outside world know about our fine climate."

"What, and raise our taxes more?" growled someone. "No, never, taxes are too high now."

"Maybe it would not cost too much to advertise this place, at least let us all think about it until next meeting," suggested D. Colyer.

THE PLAY BY JEROME GERARD; MUSIC BY RENAN PREVOST

LOVE - INTRIGUE - COMEDY

A first rate tourist attraction must be original, entertaining, enjoyable and it must be seen only in one place. Tourists travel the world over to see unusual attractions. "Serafina" and "Stars in the West" can be annual attractions for San Diego. There has never been anything offered in San Diego, to compare with the possibilities of these Historical Operettas, excepting, the two great Expositions - 1915 and 1935, in our wonderful Balboa Park.

Why we offer these Operettas - The presentation of stage shows and etc., which have been produced for years, elsewhere, does not create prime tourist attractions of merit, for San Diego. Because as a rule tourists do not travel far to see stage shows, which can be seen at home or nearby.

Or to hear music which is regularly used on the radio or on records for home playing. All of which, although, said shows and music are acceptable for amusement; but, they are in reality "common stuff" and seldom attract the well informed and enlightened tourist, seeking the unusual.

A tourist attraction of supreme merit is the Historical Operetta. And produced annually in a Civic Theatre located amidst the fine buildings of Balboa Park, which is world famous and the center of culture of San Diego. We have the Russ Auditorium, which will suffice until a Civic Theatre can be provided. We have the talent and the most enjoyable operetta - "SERAFINA"

These Operettas are new, with appeal unlike the over-played stage presentations of the past years.

So, We offer these original Operettas, they can be tourist attractions unsurpassed; because they have not been produced elsewhere, most of the music has not been published, or offered for public use. Here are two historical Operettas, in all that it implies, about our San Diego.

The historical facts presented in the Operettas are such as has never heretofore been presented. Participation is available for Patrons and Sponsors send communications to -
